BLOODY BATTLE ON TRAIN.

One of the coaches of the Georgia that from other regiments of equal size. BLOODY BATTLE ON TRAIN.

One of the coaches of the Georgia Southern and Florida passenger train coming from Jacksonville to Valdosta, Ga., Sunday night, was the scene of one of the bloodiest chapters that has been written in the history of the Okefinokee region. In a general melee, a white man named Jackson Duncaa was stabbed to death two negroes were killed, and region. In a general melee, a white man named Jackson Duncaa was stabbed to death, two negroes were killed, and Marshall Duncan was stabbed in several places, and either thrown from the mov-ing train or fell off. The man who did ing train or fell off. The men who did the killing, according to reports, are Charles and Hillary Altman, who reside near Baxter, Fla. The killing was the result of a drunken row, preceded by a long period of bad leeling between the Duncans, who are prominent naval stores men, and the Altmans and other citizens of that place, who appear to have been resentful of the development which the still and the mill had brought to that section of the country. The Duncans have stated a number of times that they were always having trouble with their neighbors, who persisted in trespassing apon their lands. On Sunday a large crowd of Moniac and Baxter people

Duncan, father of the younger Duncan, was in the crowd, but he and his sons are said to have been sober. The six or eight men who made up the other faction were very boisterous, after the train pulled out from Jacksonville, and picked a quarrel with a negro named Jim Riley, who worked for the Duncaus.
